here are not limiting their activities because the question is still unsettled. They are going ahead with the developmen of the island. They are planting citrus fruit groves and pineapple fields, confident that fruit will grow in this fertile country whatever may be the flag that flies over the custom-house. The Isle of Pines lies a little south of Cuba. It is about the size of the State of Rhode Island, and is naturally divided nto two sections, northern and southern, by a salt marsh. The northern section is the larger, and it is the only part which has been developed. The southern section is heavily timbered with hardwood rees and was wholly uninhabited until the Americans came. There is now a small colony at work getting out hardwood lumber, but there is no permanen settlement. The hardwood forests of this ection of the island will produce milof dollars worth of rare lumber. The Isle of Pines was first visited by columbus, but it was not occupied until the Spanish government in Havana made t a penal colony. There has been some griculture for centuries, but no general evelopment until now. The native in-abitants, the Pineros, live as near to ature as possible. Their houses are the hatched huts, or bohios, familiar in Cuba. They live with very little work, for the remarkably productive soil yields The banana is everywhere, and with banana patch in the back yard, the wolf at the door is not to be feared.

Geologically, the Isla of Pines is most intersting. It and a portion of the province of Pinar del Rio in Cuba form the oldest land known in the American hemthis island and Pinar del Rio have the only lands on earth which will produce the famous vuelta abajo tobacco. The Isle of Pines has a hube mountain of white marble. It is owned by a Pittsquarries of this mountain were worked and there are handsome staircases, and mantels in Havana houses which attest the beauty of the Pinero marbles.

Havana clear manufacturers now deny that the Isle of Pines will produce true vuelta abajo tobacco. Nevertheless, it is a fact that in the years 1896, 1897. and 1898, when the war was on in Cuba, dideal climate, with the most exquisite coloring of flowers, water, birds, and fishes. > At McKinley, a settlement named in honor of the President, there is one of the biggest orange groves in the world. It has 500 acres of citrus trees, all of which will come into bearing next year. The immigration from the United States s increasing all the time. The land owners of the island are selling their property to actual settlers. There is no absentee landlordism to contend with in this American colony

Driving from the McKinley grove to the McKinley town site, one sees scores of American farmers hard at work clearing away the pine trees and getting ready to set out fruit trees.
